About Brooch by Line Vautrin – Light brown Talosel encrusted with gold mirrors

This light brown Talosel brooch by Line Vautrin is a unique and elegant piece, adorned with golden star-shaped mirrors and a small convex round mirror in the center. The points of the star are formed by Talosel which has been carefully scarified by hand to create interesting reliefs on which small golden mirrors of a more rectangular shape are inset. This combination of Talosel and gilded mirrors gives the brooch a precious and refined appearance that perfectly embodies the characteristic aesthetic of Line Vautrin's work. The star shape of the brooch adds a touch of sophistication to its design, while the small round convex mirror in the center creates an interesting focal point. The light brown Talosel is organically sculpted to follow the shape of the star, giving the brooch a natural and timeless appearance. This brooch is a unique piece of art that can be worn to add a touch of style and personality to any outfit, or simply admired as an inspiring collectible. Line Vautrin was a French artist born in 1913. She acquired the technical skills in chasing and gilding thanks to her father, an art bronze worker. This allowed him to create his first collections of buttons and jewelry. With her talent and creativity, Line Vautrin quickly distinguished herself with her works that combine mischief, humor and poetry. Line Vautrin was particularly known for her engraved rebuses to be deciphered, which made her famous and earned her the nickname of "metal poetess". Among his most famous creations are the Saute-Mouton necklaces, the Plat comme la galette, Skinny as a Nail and Long as a Giraffe boxes. With her unique style and her personal touch, Line Vautrin left an indelible mark on the history of art. His artistic heritage continues to live on through his works still appreciated today.
