About Marguerite by Line Vautrin – Light beige Talosel mirror inlaid with silver grey mirrors

Line Vautrin was inspired by the daisy flower (Marguerite in French) to imagine this elegant mirror made up of a row of 60 petals shaped alternately forwards and backwards. The central convex mirror is surrounded by a wide ring lined with mirrors. A very nice work of scarification to the crown is reflected in the mirror. On the reverse, the structure is entirely scarified with “tingling”, proof of a very old mirror. Probably manufactured around the 1950s.
