About Collier de chien by Line Vautrin

“Collier de chien” (“Dog Collar”) Necklace by Line Vautrin (1913–1997), France, circa 1945. Created around 1945, the “Collier de chien” is executed in gilt bronze and composed of a succession of dachshunds articulated by circular links. Each dog is modelled with an elongated body, pointed muzzle and short legs, its simplified silhouette becoming a sculptural element in its own right. Arranged one after another, the dachshunds form a continuous chain around the neck, creating a composition that is both playful and distinctly graphic. The title itself introduces a characteristic play on words: the French expression collier de chien traditionally refers to a necklace worn closely around the neck, while Line Vautrin offers a literal and humorous interpretation of the term through a succession of dachshunds. Combining imagination and humour, the “Collier de chien” perfectly illustrates Line Vautrin’s singular approach to jewellery, transforming a familiar animal motif into a particularly original wearable work of art.
